Rundle Cup Victory for the Army

The Army regained the Rundle Cup Trophy from the Royal Navy in a hotly contested match played in Tedworth Park on 13th July.

This traditional annual match between the Army and the Royal Navy was played in baking sunshine. It was a hard-fought game with the Royal Navy starting with a 2-goal handicap and the Army determined to regain the trophy after the Navy won it last year. The final score was 7-5, with all members of the Army team scoring goals. The team comprised Brig Piers Hankinson (Commander 43 Brigade), Maj Matthew Eyre Brook, Col Nick Hunter (the new Chairman of Army Polo) and Col Michael O'Dwyer.

Earlier in the day, the Queen's granddaughter, Zara Phillips, had taken part in a charity match in aid of the Inspire Foundation, a spinal-injury charity. Zara's team, "The Eventers" played against "The Jockeys" team which included Silent Witness actor, Tom Ward.

The day also included a free fall parachute display, a Pony Club Exhibition match and the Indian Cavalry Polo Trophy match between a Combined Services Team and a visiting team from the USA.

A message for 1 Brigade Families

As we pass the half way point of Op HERRICK 18, it is a good moment to reflect on what has been achieved and the challenges that lie ahead through the rest of the summer.

The first thing to say is just how much progress is being made - veterans of Helmand will know that the province is always evolving and that has been no different this summer. The Afghan National Security Forces are now in the lead, with us in support, and they are doing a really good job. There will I am sure be challenges, but what matters is how they deal with them, and mid way through the summer they hold the initiative over the insurgents. This is really encouraging.

The Afghan 3/215 Army Brigade that we work with is genuinely impressive - they are disciplined, professional and confident. Likewise, the police have made real progress and are delivering policing appropriate for Afghanistan. This is a far cry from a few years ago. Of course, they draw confidence from our presence, but they are ready increasingly to stand independently and so we are preparing to step back yet further.

I know that you will all be very proud of your loved ones and friends out here - and rightly so. Through the years in Afghanistan our troops have displayed humbling courage and sacrifice, but the public should also be proud of what they have achieved. Helmand is unrecognisable from just a few years ago and the population have been given a real opportunity for the future. The people of Helmand now have a level of expectation about their livelihoods that they could only dream of in the past. The job is not yet done, but this is a legacy that we should all be very proud of.

We are well into the R&R period now and I very much hope that you all enjoyed or are looking forward to spending time with your loved ones. I am exceptionally proud of what everyone in the Task Force is achieving at a challenging stage of the campaign. Morale seems really high and the troops are standing up with typical resilience to the full intensity of the summer heat. Thank you, as ever, for your wonderful and unflinching support.

Brigadier Rupert Jones
Commander Task Force Helmand 18

News from the Scottish Gunners

On 12th July, Brigadier DM Chalmers DSO OBE conducted his final visit to 19 Regiment Royal Artillery (The Scottish Gunners) as Commander 12 Brigade. The main focus for the Regiment over the past six months has been a return to contingency operations and re-rolling to armour. During his visit, 19th Regiment RA took the opportunity to show the Brigade Commander just how diverse and developed the training facilities for AS90 have become, including the simulation training suite used by the Fire Support Teams. During these demonstrations Brigadier Chalmers was invited to get hands on and join in as soldiers from across the Regiment trained and practiced on the various training systems.

The Commanding Officer, Lt Col John Oldroyd, presented the Brigadier with a cartridge case on behalf of the Regiment, before he was piped off.

Tankies support massive Afghan Military Operation

Soldiers from 2nd Royal Tank Regiment (2 RTR) have supported the Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF) in a huge operation against insurgents in central Helmand, Afghanistan.

Elements from all four squadrons of 2 RTR played a vital part in the operation, which involved over five hundred Afghan soldiers and policemen clearing a notorious hotspot of insurgent activity - the first time all four squadrons have worked together on the ground.

A dust storm approaches

The armoured Warthog vehicles of BADGER squadron provided mobility and protection to the teams advising the ANSF, as well as protecting the outskirts of the ANSF advance. Using tactics and skills which were honed during training on armoured vehicles in Canada, they were able to dominate the area, making the insurgents think twice about taking them on.

Soldiers from EGYPT squadron, in Mastiff armoured vehicles, were located out to the flanks of the operation, ensuring that insurgents were not able to reinforce against the advancing ANSF. Meanwhile, artillery guns based in EGYPT's base fired illumination rounds throughout the night to allow forces to work in all conditions.

NERO squadron deployed its replenishment group, which provided troops on the ground with essential supplies of fuel, food and water. NERO's tactical headquarters accompanied the replenishment group, giving it protection as it carried out its task over several days.

The advisors of CYCLOPS squadron were with the Afghan National Army commanders in their headquarters, providing them with tactical advice.

The success of the operation has proved that the ANSF are capable of planning and executing large-scale complex operations on their own when just a few years ago UK forces would have been advising and mentoring at a close level.

The operation finished after four days, and was declared an overwhelming success, disrupting the movement of the insurgency and not allowing them the space to operate.

"It was a great operation", said Trooper Adam Cundy. "It gives you extra incentive to know that you're going to help out fellow Tankies.

"The ANSF have proven that they are able to go right into the heart of contested areas that they would have avoided only a year ago."

Major Nick Ridgway, who commands EGYPT squadron, said:

"There is no doubt in my mind that the operation was a success. The ANSF have demonstrated that they are capable of delivering the security that the people of Afghanistan deserve."

The Role of the Reserves in the Future Force 2020

In plans for the future shape of the Army, the Reserves, (previously "The Territorial Army"), will become an integral part of the Future Force, with each Reservist unit being paired with a component of the Regular Army.

On 3rd July a White Paper was published, describing how the Ministry of Defence envisages a more robust relationship between Reservists, their employers, their families and society at large :

The Army needs to know that Reservists in the Future Force 2020 can meet the increased commitments to training, exercises and deployments;

Reservists will benefit from a raft of new measures, including Armed Forces pension schemes, Defence health services when training and on operations and welfare support for their families; they will also gain transferable skills and academic qualifications. There will also be incentives for ex-Regular soldiers to join the Reserves.

Employers will receive more notice of their employee's military commitments, increased financial allowances and in the longer term they will also benefit from the extra training their staff receive.

At a regional press facility held in the Kings Royal Hussars Sgts' Mess, Brigadier Piers Hankinson, Commander 43 (Wessex) Brigade, outlined the plans in the White Paper, under which none of the TA Centres in the South West would be lost.

Pedal Power !

Four boys from All Saints school in Netheravon have cycled 20 miles to raise money for a school in Afghanistan.

The idea came from 10 year old Matthew Bradley after Dr Mohammad Kharoti from Helmand visited All Saints and talked to the children about the school he is building in his village with help from the Afghan Appeal Fund. His new school will be for over 1,000 children, most of whose parents cannot read or write. Matthew decided he wanted to do something and brought in his brother James, and friends Vaughn Covil and Max Harper to help. With their parents, the boys planned a route from Netheravon to Salisbury Cathedral via Bulford, Larkhill, Amesbury and the Woodfords and got going on their fundraising with the help of their friends and teachers at All Saints.

Despite the scorching weather and Wiltshire hills, and with the help of teacher Ross Nashwalder who cycled the second half with them, the boys made it to Salisbury in three hours, raising over £600 - an amazing achievement and something they are immensely proud of.

"We really enjoyed the cycle with our friends and are so pleased that we have raised such a lot of money for the children in Afghanistan," said Matthew.

2 RTR Welfare Centre

The 2 RTR Welfare Centre in Aliwal Barracks has undergone a transformation over the past few months to make it more welcoming for families who use it. The walls have been redecorated and there is new furniture and facilities for making refreshments.

In addition to this, £10,000 has been received from the Salisbury Diocese Charity Fund for a children's soft-play area. This equipment, a padded frame enclosing a slide and a ball-pit, is now ready for use!

The 2RTR Welfare Centre is open every weekday and the Welfare Officer, Captain Matt Noone, says that his team wants families to come to the Centre every day and not just on Thursdays for the weekly coffee mornings. There are also plans to open a Barber's shop, so that the Welfare Centre will become a 'drop-in' centre for soldiers as well as families.

My Brother the Robot

Around 500 Garrison children were treated to a free performance of "My Brother the Robot" in the Bulford Study Centre and the Tidworth Garrison Theatre last month, followed by free ice cream from the BFBS ice cream van.

The play, performed by the 'Tall Stories' theatre company and written by Director, Toby Mitchell, was described by different people as funny, educational and thought-provoking.

A First Class aid to Relaxation

A British Airways Speed Bird cabin is the latest facility to be installed at the Tedworth House Recovery Centre.

Residents of Tedworth House can often have difficulty sleeping and occasionally find that they prefer to spend their nights somewhere other than in their own bedroom.

Following discussions with British Airways, a First Class cabin, officially called 'Speed Bird', from a Boeing 747 Jumbo Jet, has been created in the Recovery Centre. The cabin has been donated and installed for free by the British Airways Maintenance Department, creating the ambience of First Class flying.

The room has four reclining electrical seats fitted with i-pads and headphones, where residents can relax in their own pod and listen to music, watch a DVD or play computer games. The importance of relaxation is key, on their road to recovery.

The staff from British Airways Maintenance Facility were keen to recreate as realistic an environment as possible, so they mocked up overhead bins, cabin walls with photographs of clouds and even seat numbers, cabin safety cards and in flight magazines.

Resident George Frost said: "To British Airways, it may not seem a huge deal to donate the Speed Bird room to Help for Heroes, but to me, it's a great space. A place to relax, unwind and forget your troubles for a bit."

British Airways Captain Nigel Cemm said: "The Speed Bird room is an analogy with a journey. Our wounded Servicemen and women are on a journey; one that has physical and psychological dimensions. Speed Bird represents a cabin in an aircraft and it has to be a First Class cabin, because our wounded deserve no less."

Congratulations !

The Haig Day Nursery in Bulford has been judged as Outstanding by Ofsted in its most recent inspection.

"We are so proud of this result. The staff team of 22 has worked very hard over the past two years to examine every aspect of practice" said Nursery Manager Catherine Clifton. "We believe that what children experience and learn in their earliest years has an enormous impact on how they learn later in life so it is really important to get it right for them at the beginning. Children need and deserve the best so that is what we have aimed for. We are so happy that this has been recognised".

The Haig Day Nursery is part of the TNB Early Years and Play group of settings which are based in Bulford and Tidworth to provide childcare for serving families and the local community. It is registered for 70 full time day care places and is open for 51 weeks of the year. Please visit the website for further information :
